Nova Grammatica:

Demonstrative Pronouns: (Hic - this) and (Ille - that)

Hic	singular			plural
	masculine	feminine	neuter	masculine	feminine	neuter
nominative	hic	haec	hoc	hī	hae	haec
accusative	hunc	hanc	hoc	hōs	hās	haec

Ille	singular			plural
	masculine	feminine	neuter	masculine	feminine	neuter
nominative	ille	illa	illud	illī	illae	illa
accusative	illum	illam	illud	illōs	illās	illa

Imperatives: The imperative mood is used to give commands and is most often used in the 2nd person, “You! Do Something”. The singular is the stem of a verb which is formed by taking the “-re” off of the infinitive: vōcāre, stem = vōcā, rīdēre, stem = rīdē, petere, stem = pete, audīre, stem = audī. For the plural, add “-te” to the stem.

For 3rd conjugation, take the “-e” off the stem and add “-ite” (ex. "petite")

	singular	plural
1 st conjugation	vōcā (You! Call.)	vōcāte (You (pl)! Call.)
2 nd conjugation	rīdē (You! Laugh.)	rīdēte (You (pl)! Laugh.)
3 rd conjugation	pete (You! Seek.)	petite (You (pl)! Seek.)
4 th conjugation	audī (You! Listen.)	audīte (You (pl)! Listen.)

Negative Imperatives:

Negative commands are constructed with the imperative of “nolle” – do not wish + the infinitive of what you don’t want someone to do.

singular

nōlī rīdēre! Don’t (you sing.) laugh!

plural

nōlīte rīdēre! Don’t (you pl.) laugh!

Vocative Case:

When you speak to a person directly, what you call that person must be in the vocative case. The vocative case is the same as the nominative except for singular words of the 2nd declension like servus and Caecilius. These words that end in “-us” and “-ius”, in the vocative respectively end in “-e” and “-ī”
*Names don’t usually have plurals.
