

1. The praetor declared that the charges which had been set out by the prosecutor were induced more by a hope of reward than for the sake of punishing a wicked man.

**** use a “gerund” where a “gerundive” would generally be used.

grammatical items to look out for: indirect statement, purpose construction

Vocabulary suggestions: expōnere, adducer, spēs, praemium, magis quam, pūnīre, scelerus

---

---

---

2. Meanwhile, the consul, growing more and more angry because his partner, who had betrayed him, was threatening to invent even more serious charges against him until he was sent into exile, finally advised him to either change his plans or expect a similar fate.

grammatical items to look out for: inceptive, (to invent – indirect statement), “dum + imperfect subjunctive, indirect command.

Vocabulary suggestions: īrāscī, etiam, gravis, mittere, vel, consilium, sors, expectāre

---

---

---

---